A DAY OF SUMMER BEAUTY

BY C BROOKE

Out in the golden Summer air
 Amid the purple heather
A woman sat with drooping head,
 And hands close knit together,
Never a bitter word she said
Though all her life looked cold and dead—
Cold in the glowing haze that lay
 Over the fair green earth that day
 That day of summer beauty

Far far away where leafy woods
 Touched the sky cloud riven
A thousand birds rang out life s bliss
 In jubilee to heaven
How could the poor old withered throat
Carol echoes to each soft note?
Every soul must pay life s cost—
Her deepest silence praised God most,
 That day of Summer beauty

Too dulled her soul too worn to feel
 Summer delight acutely,
While earth was praising God aloud
 Her patience praised Him mutely
Her narrow life of thought and care—
Not life to live but life to bear,
Contented that her life was sad
While all God s soulless things were glad
 That day of Summer beauty

And where she stayed a dusky speck
 In gorse and heather glory —
A weary spirit watched and read
 The pathos of her story,
A spirit doubt opprest and worn,
Hath found another more forlorn
That trustful stayed nor sought to guess
Life s meanings—which are fathomless,
 Through all the Summer beauty

HOW IS IT MADE?—During one of the earlier visits of the royal family to Balmoral, Prince Albert, dressed in a very simple manner was crossing one of the Scotch lakes in a steamer, and was curious to note everything relating to the management of the vessel, and among many other things the cooking Approaching the "galley" where a brawny Highlander was attending to the culinary matters, he was attracted by the savory odors of a compound known by Scotchmen as "hodge-podge," which the Highlander was preparing "What is that?" asked the Prince, who was not known to the cook "Hodge podge, sir," was the reply "How is it made?" was the next question "Why, there's mutton intil't, and turnips intil't, and carrots intil't, and——" "Yes, yes, said the Prince who had not learnt that "intil't" meant "in it expressed by the contraction intil't," "but what is 'intil't'?" Why there's mutton intil't and turnips intil't, and carrots intil't, and——" "Yes, I see, but what is intil't?" The man looked at him, and, seeing that the Prince was serious, he replied "There's mutton intil't and turnips intil't, and——" "Yes, certainly, I know, urged the inquirer, 'but what is 'intil't'—'intil't?" "Why," yelled the Highlander brandishing his big spoon 'am I na tellin' ye what's intil't? There's mutton intil't, and——' Here the interview was brought to a close by one of the Prince's suite, who fortunately passing stepped in to explain matters to the Highlander who opened his mouth with stupid wonder at the possibility that a wise man like himself should not at once have known that it was the Prince

A MOTHER'S HOME—The most perfect home I ever saw was in a little house, into the sweet incense of whose fires went no costly things Six hundred dollars served for a year's living of a father, a mother, and three children But the mother was a creator of home, and her relations with her children were the most beautiful I have ever seen Even a dull and commonplace man was lifted up and enabled to do work for souls by the atmosphere which this woman created Every inmate of her house involuntarily looked into her face for the key note of the day, and it always rang clear From the rose bud or the clover leaf which, in spite of her housework, she always found time to put by our plates at breakfast, down to the essay or story she had on hand to be read or discussed in the evening, there was no intermission of her influence She always has been and always will be my ideal of a mother a wife It to her quick brain, loving heart, and exquisite tact, had been added the appliance of wealth and the enlargement of wider culture hers would have been absolutely the ideal home As it was, it is the best I have ever seen It has been more than twenty years since I crossed its threshold I do not know whether she is living or not But as I see house after house in which fathers, mothers and children are dragging out their lives in a haphazard alternation of listless routine and unpleasant collision, I always think with a sigh of that little cottage by the seashore, and the woman who was the 'light thereof,' and I find in the face of many women and children, as plainly written as I as I see it in the newspaper columns of 'Personals'—'Wanted—A Home'—Exchange

DEATH BED REPENTANCE THAT WAS PREMATURE—A remarkable instance of death bed repentance has just occurred in Butler County Ky A man who was very ill, confident that his last hour was fast approaching sent for a magistrate, and made a confession that in the year 1870 he had murdered a man named Charles Mitchell, on Green River His story was that during the war he and Mitchell had robbed a man named Davenport, in Warren County and that in the division of the spoils Mitchell had taken more than his share In revenge, the self confessed murderer watched his victim for ten years with the purpose of killing him, and at last, when a favorable opportunity presented itself he shot him through the heart Mitchell, when shot, was standing on a barge, and his body fell into the river It was never found, and though suspicions of foul play were entertained, there was no proof even of his death The man who fired the fatal shot, having eased his conscience by confession immediately began to get better, and now promises to regain his health entirely In the meantime the officers of the law are preparing to arrest and prosecute him whenever he has recovered sufficiently to be safely removed from his bed

SENTIMENTAL AND PRACTICAL—"Conductah," simpered a lady on an outgoing Eastern train last evening, "will yeou be so kind as to bwing me a gleass of watah?"

The polite conductor thereupon marched to the water tank detached the German silver mug from its long clanking chain, and returning with it filled to the brim, obsequiously proffered it to the fair traveller

She took it with a smile she bowed—and stuck it under the nose of a musty looking poodle dog on her lap who quietly lapped up the liquid refreshment

When the conductor received that cup again it was noticed that he softly slid it out of the nearest open window But though done softly, you could see by the way he set his teeth together, that he wished it was the dog—or the woman —Chicago Journal

The condition of the female iron workers in England has lately been shown by an inspector's report to be distressing Terrible social chaos prevails in their communities, and education moral, physical, intellectual and spiritual life are all set at defiance. England is not so strong in the bodies and souls of her people individually or in her numbers collectively that she can afford this wholesale degradation It is pointed out that the only remedy for the evil is an extension to nail, chain, and brick works of the principle of the act by which women were removed altogether from mines and coal pits, an act which, has, during the thirty years it has been in operation, wrought nothing but good to the workers in the industries affected and to the community at large

"Yes, sir," said a gentlemanly looking man on Washington Street on Saturday, "the panic will have to come, no preventing it You see that man just going away? Well, he has a bill against me, and he says if I will pay him that he can pay some one else, in other words, that if each man will pay what he owes, the others can pay, and that thus, under the rules of political economy, the thing will travel around in a circle But he didn t calculate that the thing must have a bottom or the circle will break You see I owe him, but the trouble is that nobody owes me, and that breaks the circle, and the broken circle makes a panic I am the starter" And he took a peanut and departed

All the engineers of the German army are taught swimming in their first year, and are required to swim half an hour, without resting or swimming on the back, but, contrary to a recent report, they are not obliged to take exercise with their clothing on

SPANISH PROVERBS.—"A true hidalgo would rather have his clothes torn than mended" "The devil climbs the belfry by the vicar's skirts" "A turn of the key is better than a friar's promise." "The friar who begs for God begs for two."

THE YOCUT DANCE FOR THE DEAD

It was once my good fortune, says Stephen Powers, to witness in Coarse Gold Gulch, California, the Yocut Dance for the Dead, or Dance of Weeping, which was one of the most extraordinary human spectacles I ever beheld It was not the regular annual mourning, but a special one, held in behalf of Colomusnim, a sub-chief of the Chookchancies, who had recently lost a sister, but it was in all respects as strange, as awful, and as imposing an exhibition of barbaric superstition and barbaric affection as is afforded by the formal anniversary Not to my dying hour will the memory of that frightful midnight pageant be effaced.

It will be well to explain that, among the Yocuts, this Dance of Weeping is protracted nearly or quite a week The first two or three nights—while they are waiting for the arrival of all the delegations and the late comers—are occupied only in speech-making, story telling, jokes, etc, until a late hour, but during the last three nights they dance throughout the night until morning, and on the third night about daybreak they burn the offerings consecrated to the dead This happened to be the first of the three last nights, hence no burning occurred, but in every other respect it was complete and all the exercises were conducted with more energy and by fuller choruses than they would have been after the Indians had become exhausted

When the Indian interpreter, Tueh, and myself entered the camp, it was already an hour after night fall, but there were yet no indications of a beginning of the dark orgies that were to be enacted We found about three hundred Indians assembled, at a place remote from any American habitations, in a gloomy ravine, and encamped in open booths of brush wood running around three sides of a spacious quadrangle This quadrangle had been swept and beaten hard for a dancing floor, and near one of the inside corners there was a small circular embankment of earth like a circus ring, with the sacred fire brightly burning in the centre Colomusnim and his relatives, the chief mourners, occupied the corner booths near this ring and near by was Sloaknitch, the head chief of the Chookchancies, by whose authority this assembly had been convened Here and there a fire burned with a staggering, sleepy blaze just outside the quadrangle, faintly gleaming through the booth, at intervals an Indian moved stealthily across the half illuminated space within, while every now and then the atmosphere was made discordant and hideous, as indeed the whole night was, during the most solemn periods, by the yelping, snarling, and fighting of the accursed hordes of dogs

For fully a half hour we slowly sauntered and loitered about the quadrangle, conversing in undertones, but still nothing occurred to break the sombre silence, save the continually repeated scurries of yelps and howls from the abominable dogs Now and then an Indian slowly passed across and sat down on the embankment, while others in silence occasionally fed the fire But at last from Colomusnim's quarter there came up out of the darkness a long wild, haunting wail, floating out through the silent night with an inexpressible mournfulness After a few minutes, it was repeated Soon another joined in then another, and another—slowly, very slowly—until the whole quarter was united in a dirge like, eldritch, dismal horus After about an hour, the wailing ceased as slowly as it began, and there was profound death like silence, broken only by the often renewed janglings of the dogs

Some time elapsed before any further developments occurred, and then Sloaknitch, a little old man, but erect as an arrow, with a keen face and basilisk eyes, stepped forth into the quadrangle, and began to walk slowly to and fro around three sides, making the opening proclamation He spoke in extremely short, jerky sentences, with much repetition, substantially as follows:

"Make ready for the mourning Let all make ready Everybody make ready Prepare your offerings Your offerings to the dead Have them all ready Show them to the mourners Let them see your sympathy The mourning comes on It hastens Everybody make ready" etc

He continued thus about twenty minutes, then closed, and re entered his booth, after which he took no further part in the proceedings except as a private person By this time, the Indians had collected in considerable numbers, sitting on the embankment. They kept slowly coming forward until the circle was completed, and the fire was only visible shooting above their heads A low hum of conversation began to buzz around it, as of gradually awaking activity The slow piston rod of aboriginal dignity was beginning to ply, the clatter of the machinery was slowly swelling up Indians, like Germans, must take their time No woman had yet appeared on the scene It was now quite ten o clock, and we were getting impatient

Presently, the herald—a short, stout Indian with a most voluble tongue—came out into the quadrangle with a very long staff, and paced slowly up and down the line of booths, proclaiming "Prepare for the dance Let all make ready We are all friends We are all one people We were a great tribe once Now we are small All our hearts are as one. We have one heart Make ready your offerings The women have the most money They have the most offerings They give the most. Get ready the tobacco. Let us chew the tobacco," etc This man spoke with an extraordinary amount of repetition For instance, he would say "The women—the women—the women—have the most—have the most—the most money—have the most money—the women—the women—have the most offerings—the most offerings—give the most—give the most—the women—the women—give the most" He spoke about as long as the head chief had, and while he was speaking, the savages were preparing a decoction of Indian tobacco by the sacred fire When he ceased speaking, he took his place in the circle, and all began to sip and taste the tobacco, which seemed to be intended as a kind of mortification of the flesh Sitting along on the embankment, while the nauseous mess was passing around in a basket, and others were tasting the boiled leaves, they sought to mitigate the bitter dose with jokes and laughter For instance, one said: "Did you ever see the women gather tobacco for themselves?" This was intended as a jest, for no woman ever touches the weed, but nobody laughed at it. As the powerful emetic began to work out its inevitable effect, one after another arose from the circle, and passed slowly into the outer darkness, whence there presently came up to our ears certain doleful and portentous sounds, painfully familiar to those who have journeyed much on the ocean After all the Indians in the circle, except a few with strong stomachs, had gone forth and and returned to their places, the hour being eleven o'clock, the herald passed around as before, making the third proclamation.

"Let all mourn and weep O, weep for the dead Think of the dead body lying in the grave We shall all die soon—all die We were a great people once. We are weak and little now Soon we shall all be gone. Be sorrowful in your hearts O, let sorrow melt your hearts Let your tears flow fast We are one people We are all friends. All our hearts are one heart"

For the last hour or so, the mourners and their friends and sympathizers, mostly women, had been collecting in Colomusnim's quarter, preparing their offerings Occasionally, a long, solitary wail came up, trembling on the night-air.

At the close of the third proclamation, the death-dance and the mourning began—the Indians being crowded promiscuously in a great open booth As they danced, they held aloft in their hands or on their heads the articles they intended to give in memory of the dead. It was a splendid exhibition of barbaric gewgaws Glittering necklaces of rare marine-shell, bits of American tapestry, baskets of the most intricate workmanship—on which they had toiled long months, perhaps years—circled and furred with hundreds of little quail plumes bespangled with beads, scalloped, festooned, and embroidered with beadery until there was scarcely place for the handling, plumes, furs, shawls, etc Colomusnim had a pretty plume of metallic-glistening raven's feathers in his hand But the most remarkable article was a great plume, nearly six feet long, shaped like a parasol slightly opened, mostly of raven's feathers, but containing rare and brilliant spoils from all the birds of the forest topped with a smaller plume or kind of coronet, and lavishly bedecked through all its length with bulbs, shell clusters, circlets of feathers, dangling festoons—a magnificent bauble, towering far above all, its glittering spangles and nodding plume on plume, contrasted strangely with the tattered howling savagery over which it gorgeously swayed and flaunted Another woman had an image, very rudely constructed of shawls and clothing, to represent the dead sister

The beholding of these things—some of which had belonged to the dead woman—and the strong contagion of human sorrow, wrought the Indians into a frenzy Wildly they leaped and wailed, some flung themselves on the earth, and beat their breasts There were continual exhortations to grief Sloaknitch, sitting on the ground, poured forth burning and piercing words "We have all one heart. All our hearts bleed with yours Our eyes weep tears like a living spring O, think of the poor dead woman in the grave" Colomusnim—a savage of a majestic presence, bating his garb—though a hesitating orator, was so broken with grief that his few sobbing words moved the listeners like a funeral knell Beholding now and then an especial friend in the circle of sitters, he would run and fall upon his knees before him, bow his head to the earth, and give way to uncontrollable sorrow Other mourners would do the same, presenting to the friend's gaze some object which had belonged to the lamented woman The friend if a man, would pour forth long condolences if a woman, she would receive the mourner's head in her lap, tenderly stroke down the hair and unite in lamentation Many eyes, both of men and women, of mourners and strangers, glistened in the flickering firelight with copious and genuine tears

But amid all this heart felt mourning, there were occasional manifestations of purely mechanical grief which were very laughable The venerable Sloaknitch, although a gifted and thrilling orator a savage Nestor, preserved a dry eye, but once in a while he would arise in his place and lift his voice on high like a sand hill crane, then presently sit down and calmly light a cigarette After smoking awhile he would stand up again and join in the mourning Cigarettes were constantly being smoked An Indian would take one out of his mouth, give a prolonged and most dolorous blast, and then take two or three whiffs again Yet even these comical manifestations were so entirely in earnest, that nobody thought of laughing at the time and though one's sense of humor could not but make silent note of them the while, they were greatly overborne by the preponderance of real sorrow, by the spontaneous and unmistakable outpouring of grief So far, even from smiling at them, one might, without accusation of sentimenal weakness, have dropped a tear at the spectacle of these poor creatures, weeping not more perhaps for the loved and lost than over their own miserable destiny of extermination

These demonstrations continued for a very long time, and I began again to be impatient, believing that the principal occasion had passed It appeared afterward that the Indians are required by their creed and custom to prolong the proceedings until daybreak, hence this extreme deliberation But at last, about one o clock in the morning, upon some preconcerted signal, there was a sudden and tumultuous rushing from all quarters of the encampment, amid which the interpreter and myself were almost borne down For the first time during the night the women appeared conspicuously upon the scene, thronged into the sacred circle, and quickly formed a ring around the fire—a single circle of maidens facing inward The whole multitude of the populous camp crowded about, surging and jostling A choir of male singers took their stations hard by, and commenced the death song, though they were inaudible except to the nearest listeners At the same instant the young women began their frightful dance, which consisted of two leaps on each foot alternately, causing the body to rock to and fro, and either hand was thrust out with the swaying, as if the offering it held were about to be consigned to the flames, while the breath was forced out with violence, in regular cadence, with a harsh and grinding sound of "Heh" The blaze of the sacred fire flamed redly out between the bodies of the dancers swaying in accord, while the disheveled locks of the leaping hags wildly snapped in the night-wind, the blood-curdling rasp of their breath in concert, and the frightful ululations and writhing of the mourners, conspired to produce a terrible effect At the sight of this weird, awful, and lurid spectacle, which was swung into motion so suddenly, I felt all the blood creep and tingle in my veins We were beholding now at last the great Dance for the Dead.

All the long remainder of that frenzied night—from one o'clock to five—those women leaped in the maddening dance, through smoke, choking dust, darkness, glaring light, cold, and burning heat, amid the unceasing wail of the multitude, not knowing or heeding aught of anything else on earth. Once in five or ten minutes, when the choir finished a chorus, there was a pause of a few seconds, but no dancer moved from her place for a moment. What wonder that only the strongest young maidens were chosen for the duty! What wonder that the men avoided this terrible ordeal!

About four o clock in the morning, wearied with the din, and benumbed with the cold of the mountains, I crept away to a friendly blanket, and essayed to sleep But it was in vain, for still through the night air were borne to my ears the far-off crooning, the ululations, and that slow pulsing, horrid "Heh!" of the leaping witches, with all the distant voices each more distinct than ever before, of the mourning camp The morning star drew itself far up into the blue reaches of heaven, blinking in the cold, dry California air, and still all the mournful riot of that Walpurgis night went on Finally the rising sun made ruddy the eastern sky, but still there was no abatement

Then slowly a soft curtain of oblivion was drawn over everything, the distant voices died away, and were still, the wailing was ended, the dancers ceased because they were weary For half an hour, perhaps, I slept Then awaking suddenly, I stood up in my blanket and looked down upon the camp, now broadly flooded by the level sun It was as silent as the grave Even the unresting dogs slept at last, and the Indian ponies ceased from browsing and stood still between the manzanita-bushes, to let the first sunshine warm and mellow their hides, on which the hair stood out straight All that wonderful night seemed like the phantasmagoria of a fevered dream

Before the sun was three-quarters of an hour high, that tireless herald was out again, going the rounds, shouting loudly to awaken the heavy sleepers In a few minutes the whole camp was in motion, not one Indian remained, although many eyelids moved like lead. The choir of singers took their places promptly, and a great company of men and women, bearing their offerings aloft as before, joined in a tumultuous rush round yet all leaping in cadence, and with the same demoniacal "Heh!" of the breath in perfect unison Every five minutes, upon the ceasing of the singers, all faced suddenly to the west, and ran forward a few paces with great clamor of lamentation Those in the front ranks prostrated themselves, and bowed down their faces to the earth, while others stretched out their arms to the west, waving their offering with imploring cries, as if vainly beckoning the departed spirits to return, or bidding them a last farewell This is in accordance with their belief in a Happy Western Land Upon the singers resuming, they would all rise and join again in the disorderly rush-round, raising a great cloud of dust This lasted about an hour, then all was ended for the day, and the weary mourners betook themselves to their booths and to sleep

FIRST-BORN

BY MARY E BRADLEY

Seventeen years of shine and shadow,
 Since the rosy light of morn
Made the sweet June roses redder,
 In the hour that you were born,—
Hour that brought to flesh and spirit
 Such an ecstasy of pain—
Such a rapture of rejoicing
 As will never come again!

I remember how the tender
 Rose of morning flushed the gray
How the sun with sudden splendor
 Changed the dawning into day,
How the dappled clouds went sailing
 All across the summer sky
How the robins trilled and twittered—
 When I heard my baby cry!

Seventeen years! but I remember
 Still the passionate delight
Of that radiant June morning
 After all the weary night
Haply born to woman nature
 It may come to you to learn
With your own child for a teacher
 Such a story in your turn

If it ever does my darling
 May the time be rosy June—
May the robins trill and twitter
 Such another happy tune —
And the child that God shall give you
 All I ask is it may be
Just the daily joy and comfort
 That my first born is to me!

A TRAIT OF JOHN NEAL—Of the veteran author, John Neal the Portland Advertiser aptly remarks that "Old age ne'er cools the Douglas blood" A number of our oldest citizens such as John Neal, Judge Howard, I C Hersey, and others were riding up home in the horse car about 6 P M, as is their wont when two young roughs, perhaps twenty two or three years of age jumped on to the front platform of the car one of them puffing away at a villainous cigar The front door was open, and the clouds of smoke rolled in, almost choking the occupants At last one of the older gentlemen could stand it no longer, and so remarked, at which one of the others touched the smoker, saying that the smoke was very offensive and that the rules of the company did not permit smoking on the cars. To this appeal the man paid no more attention than if he had been a statue Mr John Neal, leaning forward, remarked as follows "Young man, that smoke is very offensive and you must put out that cigar" "Is that so, old man?" replied the rough, lazily looking over his shoulder at Mr. Neal, without removing the cigar from his mouth The color in the old gentleman's face rose steadily, but, repressing his wrath, he again remarked, "Young man, that cigar must be put out Smoking is not allowed on the cars" "Well, old man, what are you going to do about it?" replied the rough With the quickness of lightning, Mr Neal made a bound on to that platform Quicker than it takes to tell the story, he seized the cigar from the man's mouth, and flung it in the street With one hand he grasped the rough by the nape of the neck, and with the other by the left fore arm, raised him off his feet and dashed him to the platform and, as he placed his foot on him he exclaimed, in quivering tones, "thank your stars, young man I did not pitch you into the street after your cigar" The fellow was completely cowed When we remember that Mr Neal is eighty-four years old, the mere physical energy and power displayed was something remarkable Every one will say he served the rough just right

John Randolph of Roanoke employed an excellent man named Clopton to preach to his negroes in a chapel on his plantation One cold Sunday while Clopton was giving out his hymn, two lines at a time, he observed a negro put his foot with a new brogan on the red hot stove Turning to him he said in measured voice, "You rascal you, you'll burn your shoe" As this rhyme was in exact metre of the hymn, the negroes chimed in and sang it The preacher smiled and mildly explained, "My colored friends, indeed you're wrong, I didn't intend that for the song" This being also in good measure, the negroes sang it with pious fervor Turning quickly to his congregation, he said sharply, "I hope you will not sing again until I have time to explain," but this only aroused them to repeat his last words with increased vigor Mr Clopton, finding his tongue was tuned to rhyme, then abandoned explanation and went on with the other services.

Sister (home from boarding-school, to brother, who never gets up till delay becomes dangerous)—"Willy, the orient flames with golden splendor—arise! our morning reflection awaits your presence" (William doesn't hear) Mother (shouts afterwards, making a great clattering on the balusters with the broomstick)—"William get up this instant, you lazy dogskin you, and come down to breakfast)—(William doesn't hear). Father (a few minutes later)—"Bill!" William (springing out of bed,—'coming sir!"

A youth called at the The West Alabamian office one day, and after watching them set type awhile, said to one of the typos. "You use a heap of four-penny nails"

All parts of the world, are to be represented in a masonic congress in London, in 1877 Although the world is round, it will be represented "on the square."

Little Harry, five years, was called to see the new baby. After a moment's contemplation he turned to his expectant papa with "We didn't need that!"

SOME POETICAL PROVERBS FROM AMERICAN LITERATURE.

BY THOMAS S COLLIER

I believe that an English review once said that "there was no great American poet" That, according to the English way of thinking, may be true, but judging from the fact that more volumes of Longfellow, Lowell, Bryant, and other American writers are sold than volumes by an equal number of English writers, makes it rather a hard matter to decide which is the more correct, the judgment of the reviewer or the taste of the people Certain it is that our living poets have more vigor of thought and strength of utterance than any other nation can show, and there are many gems that sparkle with that true fire of genius scattered through their writings

From some, it is impossible to take single verses or couplets without marring their power, but others give thoughts that can readily be detached with no detraction from their strength and beauty, and that still seem in the poem to be a stone that cannot be parted with In the following selections, I have simply taken those ideas, and if the favorites of those who read this are not herein mentioned, they must not feel aggrieved

John Trumbull thinks that

 No man e'er felt the halter draw
 With good opinion of the law,

And further,

 But optics sharp it needs, I ween
 To see what is not to be seen

But in short sayings like the preceding, no poet of our land is more felicitous than James Russell Lowell, as witness—

 They are slaves who dare not be
 In the right with two or three

 Before man made us citizens, great nature made us men

 And they are slaves most base whose love of right is for themselves and not for all their race

 The busy world shoves angrily aside
 The man who stands with arms akimbo set

 For men in earnest have no time to waste
 In patching fig leaves for the naked truth

And,

 But if a man before his duty with a listless spirit stands
 Ere long the Great Avenger takes the work from out his hands

Speaking of a true woman, Frances Sargent Osgood says

 She scorns to sell her rich warm heart
 For paltry gold or haughty rank—
 But give her love, untaught by art
 Confiding free, and frank

Willis Gaylord Clark thinks

 'Tis sweet to remember! I would not forego
 The charm which the past o'er the present can throw

Holmes, though more pithy in prose, always seem to be saying good things, as—

 If singing breath or echoing chord
 To every hidden pang were given,
 What endless melodies were poured
 As sad as earth as sweet as heaven

 Youth fades love droops the leaves of friendship fall
 A mother's secret hope outlives them all

And last

 Oh! maidens err and matrons warn
 Beneath the coldest sky
 Love lurks amid the tasselled corn
 As in the bearded rye

J. G Percival says

 Morning is lightest
 Only when heaven is fair
 Beauty is brightest
 Only when virtue is there

And G P Morris

 When in life s storm
 Hope s star to man grows dim
 An Angel kneels in woman s form
 And breathes a prayer for him

Fitz Greene Halleck paid a fine compliment to his friend, J Rodman Drake, in—

 Green be the turf above thee,
 Friend of my better days!
 None knew thee but to love thee,
 Nor named thee but to praise

Perhaps no poet, Shakespeare alone excepted, has had so many beautiful and touching memorials bestowed on his grave and memory by brother poets as Robert Burns, and perhaps no verse is more beautiful than this of Halleck

 Such graves as his are pilgrim shrines
 Shrines to no code or creed confined—
 The Delphian vales the Palestines,
 The Meccas of the mind

G D Prentice, speaking of time, says

 —Remorseless Time
 Fierce spirit of the glass and scythe! What power
 Can stay him in his silent course or melt
 His iron heart to pity?

N P Willis, though an ambitious man, did not seem to think well of ambition, for he says

 How like a mountain devil in the heart
 Rules the unreined ambition

Mrs Lydia H Sigourney did not believe death sorrowful for she writes

 For spirits round the eternal throne
 How vain the tears are shed!
 They are the living they alone,
 Whom thus we call the dead

W C Bryant calls for noble and good acts, that you can ——Approach thy grave like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams

He also says that

 The groves were God s first temples

Longfellow has more verses that are poems in themselves than any other of our poets Here are some of them

 Life is real! life is earnest!
 And the grave is not its goal
 Dust thou art, to dust returnest,
 Was not spoken of the soul

 A feeling of sadness and longing,
 That is not akin to pain
 And resembles sorrow only,
 As the mist resembles rain

 Trust no future howe'er pleasant!
 Let the dead past bury its dead!
 Act! act in the living present—
 Heart within and God o'erhead!

 There is no death! What seems so is transition
 This life of mortal breath
 Is but a suburb of the life elysian
 Whose portal we call death

 Art is long and time is fleeting,
 And our hearts though short and brave
 Still, like muffled drums are beating
 Funeral marches to the grave

 Nothing useless is or low,
 Each thing in its place is best,
 And what seems but idle show
 Strengthens and supports the rest

So much from single verses Now for a few lines from Hiawatha—

 As unto the bow the cord is
 So unto the man is woman
 Though she bends him she obeys him,
 Though she draws him yet she follows,
 Useless each without the other!

Thomas Buchanan Read give a desolate picture here

 The old, old sea as one in tears
 Comes murmuring with its foamy lips,
 And knocking at the vacant piers
 Calls for its long lost multitude of ships

John Quincy Adams wrote verses almost as well as he had made speeches Here is one

 Alas! how swift the moments fly!
 How flash the years along!
 Scarce here yet gone already by
 The burden of a song

Thomas Bailey Aldrich gives a quaint thought in—

 And she stood like the thought of a sculptor, carved
 In marble, snowy and cold
 But her pure sweet look was as foul a lie
 As ever a woman told

According to his theory Nature does not care much for greatness, for he says

 —— Nature smiles on our mortality A sparrow s death or the unnoticed falling of a leaf is more to her than when a great man dies

Referring to Nature, Alfred B Street sings

 Nature is full of wisdom high
 If we would her lessons scan
 Ocean and mountain forest and sky,
 Are talking forever to man

John G. Saxe mingles with his humor a wisdom that it would be well to study, as the following lines will show

 In battle or business, whatever the game,
 In law or in love it is ever the same,
 In the struggle for power or scramble for pelf,
 Let this be your motto—"Rely on yourself!"
 For whether the prize be a ribbon or throne,
 The victor is he who can "go it alone"

The following verse contains a moral that should be heeded:

 "It means just this—that a meddling friend,"
 Said the dying stalk, "is sure
 To mar the matter he aimed to mend
 And kill where he meant to cure!"

Phoebe Cary says

 So let my past stand, just as it stands
 And let me now, as I may grow old,
 I am what I am and my life for me
 Is the best—or it had not been, I hold

And Alice, her sister, cries piteously,

 To have what's best of us decried
 The need God gave us disallowed,
 Till death comes piteously to hide
 Our unkissed faces in the shroud—
 This is to be a woman

Next to Longfellow, John G. Whittier has the most complete single verses of any of our poets, and in sentiment it would be hard to say which was best Longfellow may be more finished, but Whittier has a truthfulness in his writings that speaks to the soul I shall give a few of his verses, hoping that they will form a fitting close for this collection.

 The stream is brightest at its spring
 And blood is not like wine,
 Nor honored less than he who heirs
 Is he who founds a line

 For of all words of tongue or pen,
 The saddest are these "It might have been"

 Full lightly may the prize be won,
 If love be fortune's spur,
 And never maiden stoop to him
 Who lifts himself to her

 Yet love will dream and faith will trust (Since he who knows our need is just)
 That somehow, somewhere, meet we must

 Oh! rank is good and gold is fair,
 And high and low mate ill,
 But love has never known a law
 Beyond its own sweet will

 And in the hereafter angels may
 Roll the stone from its grave away

One more for parting, and when actions that seem strange and cold in our friends bring to our souls a feeling of doubt and sadness, let us think of some other act that was kind and generous, and remember that

 The outward, wayward life we see,
 The hidden springs we may not know.

The orange crop of Florida, this year, is reported as being the largest ever grown, and the grove owners propose to make direct shipments to all parts of the country, and save the profits of the seven or eight middle hands through which the fruit now passes

A Detroit man, anxious to protect himself from the frequent and annoying visits of travelling agents and patent rights men has put a fire insurance plate over the door of his house, a sewing machine in the window, a patent washing machine on the porch, a patent hat rack extension in the hall and a lightning rod on the roof

She fanned herself with her handkerchief as she sat down on the stool in front of the soda fountain, and as the clerk was drawing the syrup she turned to her daughter a girl of fifteen, and remarked "Now, Mary, be careful Don't gulp it down at three swallows and get exploded all to pieces by the gas, but sip, sip, and don't run any risks"—Detroit Free Press

"Kate Putnam's company was here last week," says the Danbury News, "and a young Danbury clerk who gets $10 a week took his girl every evening at 75 cents a seat leaving him just $1 of his week's salary to meet current expenses And yet people talk of the decline of chivalry"

A little five year old boy, who was always allowed to choose the prettiest kitten for his pet and playmate, before the other nurslings were drowned, was taken to his mother's sick room, the other morning to see two twin babies He looked reflectively from one to the other for a minute or two then putting his chubby finger into the cheek of the plumpest baby, he said, decidedly, "Save this one"

"Bub, did you ever stop to think," said a grocer, as he measured out half a peck of potatoes, "that these potatoes contain sugar, water, and starch?" "No, I didn't replied the boy, "but I heard my mother say that you put peas and beans in your coffee, and about a pint of water in every quart of milk you sold" The subject of natural philosophy was dropped right there

The Rev Robert Collyer introduced Mr Theodore Tilton at his lecture in Chicago last Friday evening and in doing so said "I have been requested to introduce the lecturer of the evening, and do it gladly for the sake of old friendship I have broken bread with him in his house in years gone by, and he has broken bread in my house, and we shall likely keep on doing so as long as we have bread to break"

The following simple precaution is suggested by a Western exchange In retiring for the night spread newspapers loosely upon the stairways and in front of the doorways and windows The noise produced at the dead of night by treading on crackling newspapers, or attempting to remove them from the pathway, be the burglar ever so stealthy and expert, is sufficient to give almost any sleeper notice of the presence and whereabouts of the midnight foe

The kind of whiskey they have in 'Frisco—"After that the cloth was took off, and the liquors war bro't in And wot liquors they wuz, too! The whiskey was none of this yer kind that makes a man feel like sayin', 'I kin lick any son of a gun in the house,' and makes him smash things generally No, sir It was the kind that just makes a man lift his glass up gently, and say, 'Joe, old pard, I m lookin' at yer'"

There is a story told of Joaquin Miller, the poet, that when he was at Barnum's Hotel, Broadway and Twentieth street, a few weeks ago, he wrote to a friend in New Jersey, and ended the letter: "Come and see me whenever you can I am at Barnum's." The friend, who does not appear to have been familiar with the names of city hotels, answered: "I am sorry you had to exhibit yourself. If you had stuck to literature you would have made your mark and fortune. Whereabouts is the show now."

The total Prohibition vote for governor, in Philadelphia was 631.

Tilden's chances for the Presidency are not so good as they were before last Tuesday.

New fifty-cent currency notes have made their appearance. They bear the likeness of William H. Crawford, Secretary of the Treasury under President Jackson.

The latest returns from Wisconsin indicate the election of the whole Republican State ticket by from 2000 to 5000 majority. The Republicans will probably have a majority of 30 in the Legislature on joint ballot.

The Comptroller of the Currency at Washington on Tuesday was in receipt of a telegram from the president of the National Gold Bank and Trust Company of San Francisco, officially informing him that it has gone into voluntary liquidation under the provisions of the National Bank act.

In Massachusetts Rice, Republican, is elected Governor by about 5000 plurality over Gaston, Democrat. The vote for the Prohibition candidate was about 7000. Gaston's plurality last year was 7032. The Republican majority in the Legislature is increased.

Complete returns from New Jersey show that the Republicans have elected 37 members of the Assembly and the Democrats 23. The Republican majority on joint ballot will be 17, against a Democratic majority of 17 on joint ballot last year. One or two close districts may slightly change the majority.

The returns from New York indicate a Democratic majority of about 10,000 in the State. In New York city all the anti-Tammany candidates are elected. John Morrissey is elected to the State Senate as a Reformer and Anti-Tammanyite by 2000 majority. The Republicans have carried both branches of the Legislature.

The Russian Government, according to the latest mail advices from Europe, is engaged in a new and vigorous crusade against Socialistic agitators. Many arrests have been made. In one village alone, near Moscow, thirty working men were seized by the police. One of them, believed to have been a leader among the Socialists, resisted so desperately that he had to be killed. The police think they struck a blow at the centre of the movement from which it will not recover.

The election in Philadelphia on Tuesday was favored by the prevalence of good order at nearly all the polls. The aggregate vote for Governor was 112,450, and the entire Republican ticket was elected by majorities ranging from 6,680 to 18,637. The majorities are as follows:

Hartranft, Governor,	17,349
Rawle, State Treasurer,	16,135
Biddle, Judge of Common Pleas,	18,637
Lane, Recorder of Deeds,	11,312
Bingham, Clerk of Quarter Sessions,	6,689

The result of the election in Pennsylvania just suits the Doylestown Democrat. The Erie Platform is buried so deep that it cannot be resurrected. "Hip, Hip, Hurrah? Glorious Victory." And the Democratic county ticket, sheriff and all is elected. The Democrat still continues to edit the county printing. "Bring out the guns. There's victory in the air." The only thing that now troubles Col. Davis is the great expense to the state of those walnut stable doors that Governor Hartranft has got. But after a while he may give us a rest even on that.

Prussia proposes to abolish clerical patronage and place the appointment of pastors in the congregations. In the whole of Prussia there are, in connection with the Catholic Church, over 1,000 ecclesiastical offices in the gift of private patrons; about 500 in that of the State; and the great mass, or 5,200, are in that of the Bishops. The abolition of clerical patronage would therefore be equivalent to a revolution in the church. In regard to Episcopal patronage, it is suggested that it shall continue, but should be so modified that presentations shall not take effect without allowing to the congregations concerned the right of objection, which seems something like the veto law. The bill is justified by the Cologne Gazette as a measure of policy; but it is not denied that it is another blow aimed at the independence of the Catholic church.

The fact that several important sewing machine patents are about to expire has led to the impression that the price of the machines would be materially reduced. A reporter of the New York Tribune, however, has interviewed the leading companies and ascertained that such will not be the case. The number of patents relating to sewing machine interests is large. Some have expired, and others are nearing the end of the term for which they have been issued. Nevertheless there is a sufficient number of new patents being granted from time to time to more than counterbalance those that lapse. Inventors are continually discovering improvements, and those of any value are caught up by the great companies, because they can afford to pay the highest price for such patents. The improvements generally are made by the workmen in different factories.

Newburgh, New York, seemes to have solved the tramp problem. The New York Times thus describes it: "The householder solicited by a tramp or begger gives him a ticket, which takes him to a certain office where his case is investigated. If he is truly deserving but needy, he is supplied with food and lodging in the almshouse. If he is a pauper from another county, he is sent back there under the new law, and with the means afforded to the State Board of Charities for this purpose. If the applicant is a woman or child, a different disposition is made of the case. The child is put perhaps in the Home of the Friendless of that city, or the woman is provided with work. If sick, medicine and care are provided. Efforts are made to set all vagrants to work. By these and other simple means, begging and vagrancy are much broken up."

Jersey City has a very efficacious way of treating vagrants, which might be advantageously adopted elsewhere. As early as September last the chief of police issued an order that all persons found begging should be arrested and their cases investigated. If found to be really in need they were sent to the almshouse; otherwise they were taken before a magistrate for sentence for a term in the workhouse. All male applicants for lodgings at the station houses were searched, and if discovered to be impostors or criminals were "sent down" as vagrants. Repeated applications for lodgings by the same person were to be considered also as a sufficient reason for a complaint of vagrancy. "The result of these orders has been that applicants for lodgings are now fewer by twenty-five per cent. than before the period of the order, and street begging has almost entirely ceased. One of the good results of the order was that parties arrested in some instances were found with burglars' tools on their persons, and the authorities were thus enabled to take the necessary steps to protect the community from their depredations.

THE STATE ELECTION.

The following is a table of majorities, by counties, reported and estimated, compared with the majorities for Olmstead and Latta last year. The table includes partial or complete returns from about half the counties in the State.

The First National Bank of Pittston, Pa., was robbed of Tuesday night of $40,000 in bonds and money. The bank is a one-story building with a flat, tin roof, and through this the robbers cut a hole and three of them descended by a rope ladder into the vault, leaving two others on the watch outside. The door of the vault is furnished with a burglar alarm, but the robbers avoided this by getting in from the top. They secured their plunder by blowing open two spherical safes. A citizen saw them as they were going off, and an alarm was raised, but they escaped, leaving behind them a full set of burglars' tools. Among the bonds stolen were Lackawanna and Bloomsburg Railroad bonds to the amount of $11,000; Wilkesbarre City bonds to the amount of $5000; $20,000 in bonds of the Oxford Iron Company of New Jersey, and $1000 in Pittston Seminary bonds.

Dr. Hunter McGuire sends to The Richmond Dispatch a long account of "Stonewall" Jackson's last illness. He gives the following as the General's last words: "About half past one he was told that he had but two hours to live, and he answered again feebly but firmly, 'Very good; it is all right.' A few moments before he died he cried out in his delirium, 'Order A. P. Hill to prepare for action!' 'Pass the infantry to the front rapidly!' 'Tell Major Hawks'—then stopped, leaving the sentence unfinished. Presently a smile of ineffable sweetness spread itself over his pale face, and then he said quietly, and with an expression as if of relief, 'Let us cross over the river and rest under the shade of the trees;' and then without pain or the least struggle, his spirit passed."

At Chicago yesterday, Richard M. Hooley, the well-known proprietor of Hooley's Theatre, went into voluntary bankruptcy. His unsecured debts are stated at $50,000, and his assets, consisting of the theatre and its site, at about $175,000. The property, however, is encumbered to the extent of $125,000. Ira Holmes, formerly President of the broken Manufacturers' National Bank, also went into bankruptcy. His secured liabilities are $361,000, unsecured $112,000. His assets are unsecured notes to the amount of $46,000, a large interest in the Clifton House, mortgaged nearly to its full amount, and $12,000 worth of the stock of the defunct bank. He has also some personal property.

The National Gold Bank and Trust Company at San Francisco suspended payments Monday. A crowd gathered around the doors of the bank before the hours for opening, and there being every indication of a continuance of the run which commenced on Saturday, the officers decided, "as a measure of safety," to refuse to pay checks. They say the bank can pay everything in full, and will resume as soon as possible, but they give no intimation of the date. It is said the bank has been weak since the failure of the Bank of California, paying only its small depositors in full, and obtaining extensions from the larger ones. No excitement was apparent at the other San Francisco banks.

Commissioner Smith says the Indians who recently defeated the soldiers near Fort Hayes are a band of seventy-five to one hundred Cheyenne warriors. They were declared outlaws nearly a year ago, but surrendered last spring, and were placed upon the Cheyenne Agency. One morning they escaped with a quantity of firearms which they had concealed before their surrender, fought the troops from the sand banks all day, and escaped at night. They are hard fighters, and the Commissioner thinks it highly important that they "should now be thoroughly whipped and subjugated."

The engine of a construction train on the New Jersey Division of the Lehigh Valley Railroad exploded near Bound Brook, Monday morning, killing the engineer and two brakemen, and injuring twenty-five others, two of whom died shortly afterwards. It was thought several more of the injured would die. The locomotive is said to have been a new one. The names of only four of the dead are given—Thomas Cope, engineer; William Thomas, brakemen; Allen King, brakeman; and Palmer Thompson, boss of the workmen.

John King of Tennessee is very busy asking questions about what has taken place during the last thirteen years. He had a farm in Tennessee in 1862, and the soldiers of both armies made themselves cordially at home on his premises. So he removed with all his produce to a cave in the Cumberland Mountains. A storm threw down a rock which closed the mouth of the cave. Therein he lived for thirteen years, in the dark, eating from his produce and drinking from a spring. The other day a railroad company, blasting for a tunnel, blasted him out.

Latest advices from Europe indicate that breadstuffs are likely to advance. The Mark Lane Express (London) say that late storms and floods have seriously retarded the annual sowing; and that the foreign old wheat is the main reliance. "The more we know of the crops of 1875," it says, "the less satisfaction it gives. France about maintains her rates. Belgium and Holland are rather dearer. Germany is generally very steady, but Dantzig is higher. Prices at St. Petersburg, Vienna, and in Hungary are unchanged."

Now that England has annexed the Fiji Islands, it is said her Australian colonies are very anxious that the sovereignty of Great Britain should be extended over the enormous island of New Guinea. To this proposition it is objected that the interior of the island is almost unknown, and that malarious swamps cover a large part of the coast. The natives are hostile to Europeans and there is nothing to tempt colonization except a large supply of cocoa nuts. A Lieut. Armit, however, is trying to enlist 200 men in London for an expedition to New Guinea. He offers no pay, but in the event of their succeeding in making a settlement promises each man four square miles of land in the new country. He maintains that on the northern side of the great mountain chain which traverses the island in a northwesterly direction the climate is comparatively dry, cool, and healthy, and that the northern coast line is as bold and steep as the southern coast is low and swampy. He says he has chosen a site where not only cocoa nut forests are to be found, but also an abundant growth of teak, sandal and ebony. The mineral wealth will, if there, in his opinion, be in due time developed.

A writer in Blackwood gives this entertaining gossip concerning Michael Angelo's method of working: "Through his impatience and enthusiasm, Michael Angelo ruined block after block of marble by working with too great vehemence near the surface. Too eager to arrive at a point where his true genius would find play, he assailed the marble with such violence that he often struck off pieces which trenched into the just limits of the surface; and, as they could not be replaced, he was forced to finish as he could—not as he would. Had he confined himself more to elaborating his work in clay, and then intrusted the blocking out in marble to a mechanical workman, we should have had not only a much larger number of grand works by him, but they would have been freer of great defects. For instance, the back of the head of Moses has been chiseled away until it is an impossible head. Again, the David is sacrificed to the exigences of the marble. And the head of his famous Day was probably left unfinished because he perceived that it was turned beyond the limit permitted to nature without breaking the neck."

The rebuilding of Virginia City is progressing so rapidly that the burned district is already dotted with shanties. Work being plentiful and wages high, the people are in better spirits, and supplies for the needy are arriving so fast that in a few days no more will be required. It is believed, in fact, that "the town will be all right in a week or two." On Saturday the Gould and Curry Company commenced hoisting ore for the Consolidated Virginia Company, and will hoist two hundred tons daily. It is expected that work will be resumed in the Consolidated Virginia and Ophir Company's shafts in about three weeks. The water in the mines below the 1550 feet level is steadily subsiding, and no "caves" have occurred.

Prof. Swing is not disposed to be melancholy over his troubles with the Presbytery. The refusal of the Synod of Illinois North to do anything with his case calls from him this good-natured comment: "The Fourth Church, upon the assumption that the Synod was about to act on its case, sat down and waited, and then the Synod, upon the assumption that the church is about to act, has sat down and waited, and now they both sit looking at each other in a most lamb-like fashion. They remind us of the two French gentlemen, who failed to have a carriage ride because neither was willing to be so rude as to enter the carriage first

There is a remarkable waiter at a hotel in Antwerp. He waits at table with great attention and receives the smallest fee with gratitude, yet he has hanging up in one of the rooms of the some hotel pictures worth at least $150,000. Among them are works of Teniers, Vandyke, and other famous artists, all undoubted originals. He has been offered $100,000 for one Holy Family and $6,000 for another picture, but he is deaf to all inducements to sell. He will show his pictures to visitors only after a formal introduction, and then he shows them with dignity and talks about them with great intelligence.

Charles Patterson was taken from the jail at Sidney, Nebraska, on Friday night by a mob of masked men, and hanged from a telegraph pole. The Sheriff, however, overpowered the mob and cut down Patterson in time to save his life. Patterson had killed a herder, about thirty miles from Sidney, on Wednesday.

Brother-in-law Casey must keep a quieter tongue in his head. Having abandoned his New Orleans office to his clerks and taken quarters at Washington, he appears to be canvassing the capitol for Grant, but with so little discretion that the newspaper correspondents have captured him and relieved him of all the ideas that are worth reporting. Brother-in-law Casey, his interviewers say, announces boldly that the President is convinced the "emergency" suggested in the famous Harry White letter has now actually arrived, and that patriotism, therefore, requires him again to sacrifice personal consideration for the good of the country. It was his Des Moines speech, the President believes, that carried Ohio! His brother-in-law is confident that he will be the candidate of 1876, and does not hesitate to say, in that rich slang which is the shibboleth of your true politician, "the pins are already set up for the convention." To the correspondent who asked what was to become of the other fellows—such as Morton, Blaine, Conkling and Hayes—this shrewd henchman said: "Neither of these has any positive strength outside of a limited locality, while Grant is known everywhere. * * * He has the Methodist Church and the banks and the scared capitalists on his side, and between the cry of schools in danger, the Pope and a panic among the worshippers of the golden calf, he shall go in with a rush of saints and sinners." Thus the loquacious Casey entrusted with the dearest secrets of his patron! Will no friend of the President return the truant to New Orleans? The people were long ago disgusted with Grant's administration, and to have it taken for granted in this style that they are all fools, and will not discriminate between honesty and dishonesty, virtue and vice, patriotism and selfishness, in their votes, is an insult which they will not easily forget. Grant should caution his indiscreet brother-in-law.—Philadelphia Times.

Doylestown and Vicinity.

Senator Wallace addressed a large audience in Lenape Hall, on Saturday evening last His subject was, "There is something wrong." He spoke of the political condition of our Nation and State, portraying vividly before the minds of his hearers, remedies for their faults and mismanagements He spoke of the finance question, explaining the issue to the full satisfaction of all present Throughout his speech he was frequently interrupted with bursts of applause

Andrew J Larue, a prominent citizen of this borough and a man well known through the county, died at his residence on Monday morning last, after a long and severe illness Mr. Larue was a man who was always desirous of promoting the interests of our town and vicinity, and many of the finest attractions that surround us, are owing to the interest that Mr Larue took in them He has been prominently connected with the politics of the county, at one time holding the office of County Treasurer He was engaged in the real estate business, and in both positions adopted a fair and honorable system of dealing, which won for him the lasting friendship of all those who knew him in a business way He will be greatly missed by his large number of friends, who looked upon him as a man worthy of their esteem and friendship He leaves a wife and one child to mourn their sad bereavement He was buried on Thursday, and his funeral was a very large one

The election passed off very quietly in our borough The working politicians were in attendance at the polls during the whole day, advocating the interest of their friends All seemed to work in perfect harmony The vote polled was a large one, and the tickets were pretty well cut The law prohibiting the sale of liquors on election day was strictly carried out by the hotel keepers The polls closed at seven o clock, when those of both parties repaired to their different headquarters to await the news from different townships in the county, and to figure over the probabilities of of the vote Nothing of any importance was received, and about eleven o clock the head quarters were deserted

The meeting of the Y M C A last Friday evening, was unusually interesting The usual devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev Mr Brinckloe and the literary exercises were under the charge of Mr Jesse Knight The recitations and music were well selected and delivered Among the most interesting pieces of the programme, was an essay on Impressions," by Allen Van Horn, which gave rise to some discussion Mr Buttine formerly a teacher in the place addressed the young folks quite humorously, and was heartily applauded by them Next Friday evening the Rev Mr Collyer of Richboro', will deliver a lecture, subject, "Infidelity unmasked

Monday evening a political meeting was held in Johnson's Hall notwithstanding the very disagreeable state of the weather, a large and orderly audience was present The meeting was addressed by M Brozius, Esq of Lancaster and Hon C N Taylor The eloquence of the former has already spread throughout our section of the county, and the same praise and admiration are due him wherever he goes The latter is so well known that a word about him is unnecessary Quite a number of ladies were present, and expressed their pleasure in the addresses and the order that prevailed

"Election day" passed off very quietly The candidates of this neighborhood received a larger vote than the party ticket

THE TOLL BRIDGE AT SCHENCKS.

EDITOR GAZETTE —I saw an article in your paper of the 28th inst, concerning the toll bridge at Schenck's station, recommending the County to buy and make a free bridge of it Now supposing Bucks County were to buy and throw it open to the public, a free bridge Why hardly any one with a spirited horse dare travel from Schencks to Bristol without the risk of having his neck broken, as the road runs as close to the Railroad as it is possible to get it If the lower end of Bucks County wants a free bridge over the Neshaminy, I would suggest that they take the money that it would cost to buy the Schenck bridge, and build one on the line of the State road and river road to Bristol, which would make a direct road from Bristol to Frankford that any one could travel with safety Such an improvement would greatly accommodate the heavy tax payers of the lower end of the County, and would soon become a source of revenue to our treasury, as it would induce citizens to build along the line of such a splendid road

THE annual session of the Bucks County Teachers' Institute will be held in Lenape Hall, Doylestown commencing at 2 P M, on Monday November 8th, and closing on Friday evening the 12th Amongst the Instructors from abroad are J P Wickersham, LL D, State Superintendent John H French, LL D., late Secretary of the Board of Education of Vermont, Prof Mark Bailey, of Yale College Miss Lelia E Partridge, late of the Girls' Normal School of Philadelphia, and Prof George L Maris and Miss Delia T Smith, of the West Chester State Normal School A pronouncing bee will be held on Thursday evening, and four prizes will be awarded, on Monday afternoon a spelling exercise will be given A special session of the teachers of Graded Schools will be held on Friday Parties going to the Institute by way of the Philadelphia and Trenton Railroad to Philadelphia, the Belvidere Delaware Railroad to Point Pleasant, or the North Pennsylvania Railroad, can procure orders for excursion tickets by applying, with stamp enclosed, to H H Hough, Doylestown The evening lectures will be given by William Parsons, Monday evening, on "George Stevenson, or the Triumphs of Perseverance," Wallace Bruce, Tuesday, "Womanhood in Shakespeare," Mrs Mary A Livermore, Wednesday "What Shall we Do with Our Daughters?" Rev H M Gallagher, Thursday, "Put Money in Thy Purse," (probably.) On Friday evening, readings by Prof Mark Bailey

SONG

BY MARK COWDEN CLARK.

With thee my thoughts are calm and sweet,
Without thee they are wild and fleet;
With thee my life is all complete Without thee it is stormy—must
Be true to me my love be true!
I am nothing if I have not you

With thee my heart is true at rest,
Without thee it is tempest tost,
With thee my life is fully blest
Without thee I am wrecked and lost.
Be true to me my love, be true!
I'm nothing if I have not you

WOMEN CARRYING REVOLVERS.

The Best Classes in Reading Arming for Against Tramps and Burglars.

Some people in Reading carry revolvers, while some of the women folks carry bowie knives, as was developed in this city last winter An extensive dealer was interviewed on the subject, with the following result

"What class of people do you sell firearms to?"

"Nearly all classes buys firearms now, Our gun trade mostly through the country although our finest guns and rifles are purchased by residents of the city"

"Do you sell many revolvers?"

"In the last nine months we have sold a great many, this is principally owing to our having come down in price A revolver we used to get $8 for we now sell at $5, and we now have them at that price up to $20

"What are your best customers for revolvers?"

"The respectable class generally buy revolvers as a weapon of self defense Some of our best citizens, especially those who have occasion to be out at night, always have seven shooters with them, and since the recent robberies in the rural districts the demand has been greater We sold four revolvers to-day to gentlemen who live in the suburbs They don't like to travel those lonely roads unarmed

"Then the practice of carrying revolvers is a general one with the better class?

"It is becoming so."

"Do you ever have any lady customers?"

"Occasionally They are generally of the fast description, however, and buy the most expensive and handsome revolvers

"Do they buy them for their use?"

"Some of them do Others purchase them to give to male friends There is a great difference in persons in choosing revolvers A gambler always buys a large one, that will carry a good sized ball, a merchant or business man almost invariably selects a small one"

"Well, how about knives and handy billies?"

"Knives are seldom sold, but we dispose of more handy billies than anything else They are cheap and very effective as a weapon, and are generally bought by the lower classes A gentleman's weapon is a first class revolver while the favorite with the majority of the lower classes, comprising roughs, &c., is the 'billy' The 'knuckles' used to be much in vogue, but they have gone out of date and we rarely have an order for them.—Reading Eagle

DEAN STANLEY ON THE FOURTH OF JULY.—The dean preached recently in Westminster Abbey, on the rebuke addressed by Christ to those who use words calculated to produce or intensify ill feeling, which occured in the gospel for the day, and then the preacher applied the words to the anniversary of the Declaration of American Independence Alluding to the events connected with this declaration, Dean Stanley said that no doubt the temper of each nation was sorely tried, and its passions were aroused, the elder by the younger, the younger by the elder, but now the old bond of love unites them Recalling the first of these anniversaries, the preacher spoke of the bitterness with which the division between the two countries was then kept open by the recriminations of king and statesman, when across the Atlantic were swiftly tossed the words, "Rakes from one, "Moss" (fool) from the other, "Tyrant" from the one, "Rebel" from the other and then he contrasted with this spirit of bitterness the subsequent reconciliation until now there is not an American who is not proud of the ancestry which once he spurned there is not an Englishman who is not proud of Washington

The plan of letting in the waters of the Atlantic, and making a navigable sea of the desert of Sahara in Africa seeming impracticable a Scotchman proposes to make a road, perhaps eventually a railway along the depression of that ancient sea bottom which extends from Cape Juby to the mysterious negro metropolis The promontory named faces the Canaries and is consequently close to the southern provinces of Barbary, said to be extraordinarily rich, healthy, and fertile A diagonal line drawn thence to Timbuctoo, 900 miles distant, crosses the western portion of the Sahara but the route leads through a comparatively low country, with convenient resting places and watering places From Timbuctoo the Niger is navigable for about 1,000 miles At present there is a caravan trade between the North Central African emporium and the other Barbary States of about $15,000 000 a year The route now traversed by the Barbary merchants, however, is about 2,000 miles in length, and is carried through a sterile and mountainous country, infested by Tuaricks and other predatory tribes, the difficulties and dangers of which greatly increase the cost of the goods on delivery at Timbuctoo

Mr James Lick's selection of Mount Hamilton, in Santa Clara county, California, as the place to put his Observatory and great telescope makes this description of the mountain by the San Jose Mercury interesting "Mount Hamilton is 4 448 feet high The summit is higher than any land within fifty miles, and consequently below the level of the plane of the Observatory, which, in an astronomical point of view, is the desideratum sought. The beautiful valley of San Jose, the snowy ridge of the Sierra Nevadas, and a boundless area of mountain scenery are in the scope of vision and the elevation is so high as to be above the fogs of summer, and is not so high as to be much disturbed by the storms of winter The party that ascended the mountain on Sunday last had a magnificent view of the grand mid-summer, while the setting of the sun almost bewildered them by its gorgeousness, as the road will open up a rare territory of agricultural lands besides furnishing one of the most delightful and romantic drives in the United States

The following pleasant story of the witty King James has just been disinterred and given fresh life by reprinting "In his first journey to London his Majesty was treated with a splendid entertainment by the Mayor of an English town, whose liberality was such that he kept an open house, in honor of the new sovereign, for several days Some of the English courtiers took occasion to hint that such examples of munificence must be very rare among the civic dignitaries of a certain other kingdom 'Faith a bit o' that are they!' cried King James 'The provost o my burgh o Forfar, whilk is by nae means the largest toun in Scotland, keeps an open house a the year round, and ay the mae that comes the welcomer!' The secret was that the chief magistrate of Forfar kept an ale-house

THE JEWEL IN TOADS.—Shakespeare and other poets locate this "precious jewel in his head," but they cultivate the flowers of poesy and were poor observers in the garden Watching these ugly animals among the squash, and cucumber vines we shall discover the jewel in the stomach, in the shape of a healthy appetite for bugs and worms The quantity they will devour is enormous, "Then log lollies with fat black bug flesh," proclaim their virtues, Toads are among our best friends, and they should have the full freedom of the garden

The following answers have been given in examinations in English public schools "Don Quixotte was written by Mark Twain and Robinson Crusoe' by Milton; Ulysses was a wizard who lived on an upholsterer's island, till his daughter Miranda married a young man named Caliban, and Edward II. was a king of England, they strapped him about, shaving him with cold water till he died," and, lastly, "Julius Feudal system was the curfew bell"

The Japanese soldier is a Sybarite compared with the average European man at arms He neither builds his own shelter dies in the trenches, nor cooks his own food. All this is done by coolies, who bring him his meals in his tent The Japanese satisfies a variety of refined, and luxurious tastes, and for the soldier's comfort when off duty, he is supplied with loose cotton robes and straw slippers, which are supplied to all upon demand

From Punch

NEW READING OF AN OLD RHYME.

Dirty days hath September,
April, June and November,
And from February until May
There is rain in every day.
All the rest have thirty one,
Without a single gleam of sun,
And if any should have thirty two,
They'd be dull and dirty too

The latest trick, and about as small a one as we know of, is the rapping up of 25 iron washers in a piece of paper in a roll with a penny at each end, and the painting of the package for a roll of 25 cents. Alabamians practice it.

George Eliot says "There are men who don't mind being kicked blue if they only get talked about."

Bristol.

IT HAS NOW BEEN PROVED BEYOND DOUBT that a Cheap Cash Store has been needed in this town, and that the people can appreciate the advantages of such an establishment is shown by the extensive patronage we have received since we have started Every good housekeeper whether they live high or low rich or poor, will naturally go where they can buy the cheapest,—therefore our custom is rapidly increasing and we are now doing twice the amount of business we first calculated upon, and notwithstanding the croaking of a few, with old fogy ideas we assert that we have saved to the town a large amount of trade by withdrawing the necessity for buyers to travel to the city to obtain goods at the right figures We continue to sell the best Cotton 6 cents Skirt Braid 5 cents, gents all linen hemmed Handkerchiefs two for 25 cents ladies all linen Handkerchiefs 4 cents, splendid Corsets 50 cents ladies Striped Skirts 50 cents ladies Calico Wrappers $1 25 Chemises 1 ruffled bosoms 50 cents Tucked Skirts 60 cents Army Blankets $2 50 per pair mens Overalls 40 cents Fulled Knit Red Aprons 30 cents, inch wide Silk Ribbon 12 cents per die or 2 cents per yard, ladies Leather Belts 15 cents gents Undershirts 25 cents best Calico remnants 7 cents Toilet Soap 3 cents, Castile Soap 5 cents Washing Soap, 4 cents, gents Unbleached Half Hose, 10 cents white, Half Hose 10 cts buff Linen Shirts, 75 cents good white Shirt, $1 00 navy blue Shirts $1 37 and 1.50, good Black Tea 35 cents, Rio Coffee 25 cents Just received from bankrupt sale—2 000 yards of Embroidery and White Goods which we are enable d to sell at astonishingly low figures—cost of them less than cost of importation Call and see us but don't buy unless you find the goods as cheap as Philadelphia or New York prices and don't come unless you have the CASH
